

Affidavit

I, Louis Pelosi, certify that in the three-volume memoirs of my late wife Rosemarie Koczý entitled I Weave You A Shroud (ISBN 0-9764756-2-6, 978-1936658-03-9, 978-1936658-23-7) all conversations and information in which I participated are presented accurately. In particular:

1) Conversation in October 2001 with the cemetery caretaker Frantz Deskowski, who had known Willy and Wally Koczý (Rosemarie's paternal uncle and aunt) as Jews (page 446), took place in my presence. My understanding was that this related to their ethnicity and not their religious denomination.

2) Conversations in December 1988 with Agnes Pryczybyl and with the son of Franz Lehmkuhler (the local tavern keeper), both of whom referred to Rosemarie's maternal grandfather Robert Wüsthoff and his family as Jews (page 211), took place in my presence. My understanding was that this related to their ethnicity and not their religious denomination.

3) Conversation in October 2001 with the archivists from Traunstein, who presented Rosemarie with a book (ISBN 3-9802831-1-9) on the city during the Nazi regime upon her informing them that she was in the camp there (page 466), took place in my presence. One of them signed the book for her and one of them marked the location of the camp on a map in the book and directed us to the place where the camp had been located (it was by then no longer there).

4) Conversation in June 1995 with an elderly man in Gersweiler (near where the Ottenhausen sub-camp of Natzweiler was), who verified to Rosemarie the existence and location of the camp (page 181), took place in my presence, as did his driving ahead of us to the place where it had been.
