We understand "administrators" as personnel not included in the contract. At LaGuardia, the College Senate is composed of Faculty, Staff, and Students. For question 12, would you consider the College P & B a governing body?

Despite having a strong governance plan, the Citytech College Council has been all but ignored by the administration. For the past 10 years, the administration has governed unilaterally, claiming legitimacy for its actions through the consent of the executive-appointed institutional personnel and budget committee. We have been working to address this situation in the past few years.

It does quite well (relatively speaking) but I am sure there can be improvement in a number of places such as with our Budget and Finance Committee.

There is a college wide personnel and budget committee or P no B -- no budget/planning presented. Also, the only appeals are through the PSC contract. There is no governance-related appeals process.

With regard to question 27, there are practical guidelines (what to include, procedural information, etc.) but not guidelines pertaining to standards or qualifications. With regard to question 28, it depends who you ask.
